NEW TITLE INFORMATION

Community research for participation

From theory to method

Edited by Lisa Goodson and Jenny Phillimore

"It is invaluable when practitioners produce reflections on experiences of undertaking their craft and this volume is no exception. With a series of illuminating chapters covering a range of topics, this will be of value to those engaged in the field of community research."

Tim May, Co-Director, Centre for Sustainable Urban and Regional Futures, University of Salford

This book bridges a major gap in knowledge by considering, through a range of reflexive chapters from different disciplinary backgrounds, both theoretical and practical issues relating to community research methodologies. The international contributors consider a number of key epistemological, ontological and methodological questions. They explore what community peer research means in a range of settings, for a range of people, for the quality of data and subsequent findings, and for the production of rigorous social research.

The collection will also stimulate thinking about how methodological advancement can be made in the field. It is the first book of its kind to combine practical and methodological reflections with clearly presented recommendations about how the approach can be used. Presenting the latest thinking in the field and providing summaries, case studies and review questions, 'Community research' will be invaluable to students, researchers, academics and practitioners that aim to place community members at the centre of their research.
